By Arthur Brisbane

A MAN WRITES in his last hour: "Burn me up, scatter my ashes around the Statue of Liberty, in sight of New York harbor. Death has set me free!" How does he KNOW that death has set him free? Nature, of which death is a part, has a habit of using the same material over and over again. The tree of this generation supplies mould to the tree that takes its place.

A man burned up today may be traveling, his spirit to continue his work and struggling in some other far off sphere.

EVERYBODY knows what a depressed working man said to his dog: "You're lucky. When you're dead, that's the end of it. But when I die, they're not through with me yet; I have to go to hell, then."

CYRUS H. K. CURTIS, with Louis Seibold to help him, is making a hard fight for the distressed stockholders of the St. Paul road. It won't do any good. When the time comes for a road to be reorganized and again yield a few millions to rich finance, REORGANIZED IT IS, and that is all there is about that.

RIOING in Shanghai, with machine guns used by foreign soldiers, is now blamed on the Russian government. Moscow sent money, you are told, to stir up the Chinese coolies. Moscow in these days covers a multitude of sins, but it doesn't explain all the violence and anarchy from Sofia to Peking and from Peking back to Moscow.

The war made men think. When they think they're dissatisfied and dangerous.

SEVENTY-FIVE years ago, in New York, eighteen merchants contributed $200 each to start the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank. Last week the bank celebrated its birthday by opening a mid-town branch, and in one working day, 9:30 A. M. to 7 P. M., 3,000 new depositors were added to the bank's list of 124,000.

THAT BANK, started with $3,600, now has deposits of $250,000,000, and holds gilt-edge securities, government bonds, etc., worth over $257,000,000.

"Sweet thou, man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings."

FLAMMARION is dead! He was an able astronomer, a useful man. He stirred up men's imagination. He had intellectual vision, nothing like at least faintly to see the greatness of the universe.

When he was already an old man, in his flat, six flights up (no elevator), on the other side of the Seine, he said to this writer: "Man is really at the threshold of knowledge. True, a shepherd of old, with his naked eye, could count only eight or ten stars in the Pleiades, and we count 45,000 great stars. But we know nothing."

D. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, head of Columbia University, the most conspicuous opponent of prohibition, says laws forbidding teaching, evolution, and similar laws that would put an iron hand around young men's minds, are "cowardice." And that is what a Frenchman would call "le mot juste."

For legislators to say, "You mustn't examine that," is like a timid person running away from something that looks like a ghost, through fear of going near it.

IN ADDITION to being cowardly it is irreligious, unchristian, and a defiance of Biblical command to refrain from investigating the theories of evolution, and ALL OTHER theories. Faithfully and emphatically, the Bible says, in first Thessalonians, Continued on Page 2, Column 4.

Dynamic Jim Maloney is a favorite to win over Jack Sharkey in their heavyweight ring classic at Braves Field tonight under the direction of the Grosscup-Pishon Post of the American Legion. SENIORS RAP 'HARVARD SNOBBERY'

FACULTY BLAMED FOR LACK OF SPIRIT

What's the matter with Harvard University?

"They" declare the members of the senior class, of whom the question was asked as a part of their graduation exercises.

"Harvard undergraduates are of just two classes. The superior, aristocratic, and the vulgar, servile, familiar son of Mr. New Rich," declares one senior.

"Harvard is a class corporation. If a student doesn't come from one of the exclusive prep schools, he never gets on the inside," declares another.

BLAMES FACULTY

"The trouble with Harvard lies in her professors," insists a third senior. "Either they are lazy or they realize their own shortcomings and they make no effort to establish contact with undergraduates."

The question which aroused this stream of comment was "What have you found at Harvard which is most odious should be changed or removed, and how?" Some of the answers follow.

"Harvard's social life is unfortunate. Harvard spirit is infinitely weak, if not a minus quantity. The extremes of the social scale are represented by men attending the college, and in fact, seem to have more representation than do the so-called middle and upper-middle classes."

TOO MUCH SNOBBERY.

"Throughout my three years in college I witnessed almost every day in classroom and out the undercurrent of somewhat animating struggle between vulgar, aggressive families and frigid, superior aloofness. There seems to be no common ground upon which all Harvard men can meet. The situation is unfortunate."

"Harvard has refused to be democratized."

"The two classes, entirely different in family and social background, do not, and probably never will, amalgamate. In its educational life, too, as Harvard is a unit, it certainly is not in its social life. There this not explain the much-regretted lack of Harvard's spirit."

The chief trouble at Harvard, I think, is that the traditional Harvard is too much of a class corporation. Men from the popular schools of the type of Milton, Franklin and St. Mark's are in the college, yet they are in the outside. It is uninteresting and uninteresting, uninteresting both for them and those on the inside. A man coming from a small school would find more in Harvard is almost hopelessly uninteresting. If he goes to the 'inside' at all it is only after a long time.

"There is plenty of scholarship and by among private school men which is wasted because their time is taken up with activities. There is as present a definite barrier between rich school and private school men at Harvard which hinders effective treatment of under-graduate life to be realized."

"The lecture system is, in my opinion, a relic of medievalism. It is merely a check against which the weak personality can hide and from which to gain protection and a little of knowledge. I think this should be changed."

"The fault, in my opinion, lies in the professors themselves. Either because of fear, because convention is a realization of their own lack of personality they have made no effort. With a few exceptions of course, to come into contact with the undergraduates. It has been my experience that if I want to go to know a professor I had to 'batter' myself into his office through several clerical walls."

"If the professor could forget his inhibitions and either try or treat the under-graduate kindly I feel that much of the devil's work done on the platform could be undone. That we would approach nearer to genuine education and to emancipation from the intellectual bourgeoisie."

ONE OF MALDEN'S SECRET BRIDES

Mrs. Frank Elmer Cyr, formerly Olive D. Coleman, student at Maiden High School, who was a principal in a secret wedding. She will receive her graduation diploma as a "missus."

Shower are predicted for graduation exercises two weeks hence at the Maiden High school, but they will be of the dry-grounds variety.

Around the classic confines of this institution today a hundred or more members of the senior class were discussing in hushed tones the surprises they would have in store for two of their charming classmates.

The former Edith Charlotte Tylin and Olive D. Coleman, a few weeks ago, took a match on the roof of the abandoned school. Their graduation ceremony, long will be, respectively, Mrs. George MacDonald and Mrs. Frank Elmer Cyr.

There they will answer when the high school shepherds are dispatched.

CHURCH OFFERS AUTO RIDES TO 'SLACKERS'

Sunday automobile riding and the Christian church are to be definitely linked by a Malden minister.

For years the members of the Trinity church have resented with some degree of the automobile, as an instrument of the devil that has driven people away from the church. The Rev. H. C. Abbott, pastor of the Trinity church, is trying to reverse this line, in a manner of speaking.

The change there is in its automobile. Also he likes to see a goodly congregation in his church on Sunday morning.

In the nature of an experiment, the Trinity church, standing at the corner of the Malden street and the Broadway street, next Sunday morning, will be taken on an automobile ride as a part of the church service.

Members of the congregation will

CHAPTER XXXIX.

O'DONNELL, as I have said, received many invitations to lecture on prison matters. Several times, when the requests came from what seemed important organizations where an exposition of the new policies might be fruitful of co-operation, he accepted. Sometimes he asked me to go for him.

One morning he was definitely scheduled to appear on a three-day program of the charitable and civil association for North Carolina, but at the last moment that he could not make the trip. I went to the office in the evening and those in charge of the conference were very much disappointed at the substitution. Of course, they were puzzled in making that one, and even in showing that disappointment in my presence. I pointed that that day, it showed me, nevertheless, and when they came on the second day of the gathering to speak in California, I found the same thing in the printed program. I determined to write and ask and make the speaker stand up and walk today."

I felt pretty much the same as I had felt the night my friend John D. Barry had begged me to that meeting in London, some time before, when, after some all-day work out foot, I made one of the best speeches of my life. The program, now, gratifying, and the Dublin newspaper printed my address in detail. I wanted to remain over on every day at Raleigh, because William Jennings Bryan, whom I had never heard speak, was scheduled to appear on the same platform, before the same gathering, but I had agreed to get back promptly in five days.

After my speech, however, several

"Will No One Help Me Escape from this Hell-Ship?"

Do Rum-Runners Shanghai Girls?

Strange rumors drift ashore from that mist-clouded fleet defying Uncle Sam's laws. This story found in a bottle picked up on a Jersey beach seems incredible. Yet SMART SET believes it to be true. Has the girl been rescued? Can any reader help in SMART SET's new crusade?

HERE is an extract from the pathetic story some misguided girl tossed overboard with a prayer that it reach land.

"Johnny asked me how I'd like to get a thrill.

"I'll give you a new one if you want a chase along with me down the Jersey coast to-night. I'm going to pick up some Scotch."

"We drove on until I could hear the surf crashing upon the beach. A pier extended out into the fog. Johnny killed his engine, switched off his lights and waited.

"The commander of the boat, a great black bulk in the night, stepped to the dock with a flashlight in his fist. Johnny began to count a wad of bills into his hand. The man grunted, switched off the light, and gave a whispered order to the men on board the boat. One of them jumped to the pier; others began lifting the cases of liquor up to him.

"Suddenly there were shots. I jumped to my feet, uncertain as to what to do, when the man who commanded the rum-runner came puffing up beside me and said, 'Yuh better hitch on with us—it's the police.'

"A bullet whined past my ear. That decided me. With a quick jump I landed on the deck of the speed boat as she began to pull away from the pier.

"After we had pulled out beyond the range of bullets, I went up the little stairs and asked, 'Is Johnny here?'

"Well, I'll be darned! Look what Johnny left us!' the captain said, peering into my face.

"I crept away from him back down into the smelly little cabin piled high with cases of liquor and dirty clothing. The first real terrible fear I had ever known came into my heart. What kind of men were these who ran such dangers, and faced death and jail so calmly? When the big man came down, my heart nearly stopped beating—what was to become of me?"

Thrillingly, pathetically, the girl's scribbled, water-soaked story goes on. Was there ever a pirate's tale more astounding than this true story of a girl's captivity in Rum Row? Read it in full in July SMART SET.

Louis A. Coolidge

A Sentinel of the Republic, "He Died for the United States"

Friends from far and near came to Boston today to attend the afternoon service at the New Old South Church for Louis A. Coolidge of Massachusetts. With his fellow citizens from many walks of life they bring each the tribute of his own heart to the memory of "the Sentinel of the Republic," tried and true, whose earthly pilgrimage is at an end.

No citizen of the Commonwealth of his day and generation has given more generously of a fine brain and loyal heart to the support of great causes than this.

Door of hopeless tasks which praters shrill, One of those still plain men that do the world's rough work.

Mr. Coolidge was "an intense nationalist" because he was a true American. The government to which he gave his allegiance was the Government of the Constitution. The Nation to whose welfare he devoted his most excellent talents, and his wealth of affection was neither a "one-man" nor a "one-branch" affair, but "the indestructible Union of indestructible States," that Daniel Webster sang.

His manifold services in peace and war, to his town, his city, his State and region, his Nation and his fellow-men qualified him for precisely the sort of leadership that he delighted to give his country and his countrymen. Public causes were the passion of his life. The greatest men of his time drew upon him constantly for counsel and advice and for the hard work of organization without which many a fight would have been lost.

Yet amid all these activities in so many fields of high endeavor this gifted and most useful citizen found time to write and speak on many subjects. He is the author of a most readable story of "An Old-Fashioned Senator"—Senator Platt of Connecticut. He has placed on the bookshelf of American biography the best "Life of Grant" that has been written.

Among this hero's qualities of triumph was his "dogged persistence." After Shiloh Lincoln said of Grant: "I CAN'T SPARE THIS MAN; HE FIGHTS."

His friends and fellow-citizens find their sense of personal loss deepened by the realization that the country can ill spare such a citizen as Louis Coolidge, because he fought "the good fight of faith." What he believed in his heart, that he dared to live and work for.

Several years ago Louis A. Coolidge closed a Memorial Day address with these words:

"There can be no higher tribute for an American soldier who fell overseas than this: 'He died for the United States.'"

There can be no higher tribute to the American citizen who fell asleep at his home in Milton in the quiet of an early Sunday morning, than the testimony of the vast company of those whom he companioned in fair and stormy weather, and those who shared the inspiration of his comradeship in many a hard fought fight:

"He died for the United States."

French-German Friendship?

It Would Solve the Problem of Civilization

Painful, French Prime Minister, SPEAKING WITH EVIDENT SINGULARITY at Strasbourg, appeals to the Germans for co-operation on the basis of RECONCILIATION. It comes late, and it would save billions of lives if it had come when the Versailles treaty was written. But even NOW it is not too late for Germany and France to replace bitter hatred with co-operation and thus solve the problems of both nations and bring peace and prosperity to both.

The French need not fear any APPEARANCE OF WEAKNESS in making a friendly approach to Germany.

War is no longer a matter of NUMBERS. The French will remain who they stand now, ahead of all other European powers in the air. They equal the Germans in airplane manufacture and in flying.

The next war will be fought not by millions of men on each side, creeping along the ground, but by a few thousand fliers on each side, attacking cities through the air.

With a PISTOL the little man is the equal of the big man, and in fact is superior. The little man has the better, bigger target.

With FLYING MACHINES the little nation is the equal of a big nation, and even it is superior. It has a more expensive national target to shoot at and bigger cities.

France was beaten and humiliated in 1870. Germany has been beaten and humiliated now, they would shake hands, call QUITS and work together for civilization, they would both have PEACE and PROSPERITY.

"Promise of Distinction"

HOW Can You Judge a Woman?

Christine Phelps of Barnard College wins the fellowship awarded to the senior "showing most promise of distinction in her work."

How can you identify "promise of distinction"? How does a great painting, statue or poem prove distinction in an artist or poet?

The great woman produces a fine child, as a great artist produces a great painting. The mother of Charlemagne, Bertha of the Big Feet, or the mother of Renan, with the wide hips, would probably not have won the "distinction" scholarship.

And, of course, it wouldn't have been won by the mother of Villon, for whom he wrote that most beautiful of all prayers of the Virgin. His mother could neither read nor write.

Somewhere there is, today, some thin, probably poor, highly nervous female child with eager eyes that will one day be the woman that all the world will talk about.

Nobody could pick her out now as "giving promise of distinction."

Things That Can't Be Done

There is truth in this picture, also humor, and, what is MORE important, there is encouragement for business men and general prosperity.

Fortunately for everybody, lovely woman can't resist a beautiful hat, beautiful dress, or beautiful ANYTHING.

If all the money came IN, and none of it went OUT, business would be bad, trade would stagnate, employment would be lacking.

Beautiful woman is the active agent in the wise and steady distribution of money. She knows HOW to buy, WHEN to buy and WHERE to BUY. She reads the advertisements, and judges values intelligently.

Money, it should be remembered, like other good things in this world, is intended primarily to CREATE HAPPINESS.

If a hat, dress, or silk stocking makes a young woman happy, the thing to do is to BUY that thing.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS

By Helen Rowland

CONSIDER my Daughter, Woman's infinite variety! Behold, it is not sufficient that she be the Leading Lady in a man's life. For, to a Good Wife is a whole wardrobe added.

When her beloved admires her, she is not content with her own beauty, but she seeks an ALIEN. She seeks a man who will direct her, who will offer her counsel and comfort, and point out the other lines behind his cloud of doubt. She requires a STIMULANT. But, when he is sick at heart and weary with worry, he seeks a "mother," who will offer him counsel and comfort, and point out the other lines behind his cloud of doubt.

With a PISTOL the little man is the equal of the big man, and in fact is superior. The little man has the better, bigger target. With FLYING MACHINES the little nation is the equal of a big nation, and even it is superior. It has a more expensive national target to shoot at and bigger cities.

HOW BANKS GUARD THEIR CLIENTS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE Empire Trust Company of New York has recently issued a pamphlet in which it gives a dozen rules in regard to checks.

The use of checks in the United States has not come about by law, but merely by convenience.

Ninety-five per cent. of the business of the country is transacted by the use of checks or other credit instruments. This means that during 1924 we did some $500,000,000,000 of business, or one hundred times the money in circulation, by the use of six and a half billion bank checks.

Checks are used for convenience and also for safe keeping.

The American Bankers' Association have a large army of highly trained operatives, specialists, who are constantly watching out for those crooks who use checks in their business.

During the thirty years of service of the association $1,212,000 was lost in 1,632 burglaries by member banks. In the same thirty years in 2,374 burglaries non-member banks lost $4,170,000. That is, the non-member banks had 45 per cent. more burglaries and lost 240 per cent. more in money than member banks.

The rules, slightly condensed, as given out by the Empire Trust Company are as follows:

1—Use a pen, and if possible, a check protector, in making out a check. Do not write with a pencil.

2—Fill in all blank spaces.

3—Don't erase. Write a new check if you make a mistake.

4—Strangers are not always crooks, but crooks are usually strangers. Be careful about cashing checks for anybody you do not know.

5—Do not make a check payable to cash or bearer except when personally presented at the bank by yourself.

6—Do not put your signature alone on the check as an endorsement when you intend to deposit it. Write below or above your signature the words "for deposit only."

7—Never sign blank checks.

8—Take care of your cancelled vouchers as you would your valid check.

9—Keep your check books locked up.

10—Watch out for the word "certified." Scrutinize all certified checks carefully.

11—The maker's O. K. or other form of approval on checks is easily forged. Look at it carefully.

12—Safeguard your checks as you would your money, for they represent money.

OUR RELATIONS TO THE MILKY WAY

By Garrett P. Servis
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Is our solar system a part of the starry belt called the Milky Way?"

"Could the Milky Way universe be seen from planets of the Magellanic Clouds regions with the aid of telescopes such as we have? So asks Mr. L. Karp, of Chicago.

THE solar system is a minute member of what, to initiate the style of modern megalomania, may be called the "Greater Milky Way."

It belongs to a vast cluster of suns, stars, planets, and other celestial bodies, lying within the field of influence of the Milky Way, but in a manner separated from it by a gap of space, as Brooklyn is separated from New York by an arm of the Atlantic Ocean.

This is not intended for an exact description of the relation of the solar system to the Milky Way, but to indicate that it is a member of a vast cluster of suns, stars, planets, and other celestial bodies, lying within the field of influence of the Milky Way, but in a manner separated from it by a gap of space, as Brooklyn is separated from New York by an arm of the Atlantic Ocean.

The sun appears to be a member of a local cloud of stars, including the brighter stars that we see around us, and Harlow Shapley has suggested that this local system may be "imbedded in and moving through the general star fields of the Milky Way."

He also says that "stars of the magnitude seen to be about 100 times as numerous as the stars of the Milky Way are actually members of a local cluster of stars of the Milky Way."

It is also affiliated with the same system.

In dimensions and possibly in time, it adds, it may be compared with the Magellanic Clouds. But this statement was made three years ago, and both observation and speculation in these matters now move so swiftly that the successive phases presented by them resemble a face in a "movie."

In truth, if we could only stretch our lives out to millions of years and impart to our memories a kind of photographic quality, the Milky Way would appear to us as restless as a storm-torn ocean. Shapley's great generalization, we should see gigantic globular star clusters, largely composed of suns, stars, planets, and other celestial bodies, plunging into the Milky Way from the outer reaches of space, and through it like huge bombs, along the crowded stars at each penetration, the stars of the Milky Way being at least dislodged and become scattered broadcast through vast systems, scattering it with their stellar debris. For Shapley has said:

"From the present evidence as to mass, velocity and distribution, the hypothesis that these globular clusters are being diverted by degrees into galactic regions and gradually robbed of their stars is upheld by observation and is not opposed to present dynamical theory" (1922).

Intensely interesting in this connection is the further suggestion that the scattered local system for which the sun belongs may have originated from one of these tremendous processes of disintegration by which a star would be destroyed to present dynamical theory" (1922).

From them the Milky Way ought to look not unlike the great oblong spiral of the Andromeda nebula as we see it, but covering a much greater area of the heavens.
